Prudential Financial

Information We Collect

We collect information about you so we can serve you and offer products to you.

It includes information:

- You give us (such as name, address, Social Security number, income).
- About the Prudential products you have (such as the kinds of products you have with us, account balances, amount of insurance).
- Others give us (such as medical information for life insurance applications, credit worthiness information from credit reports, employee identifying information for group products, such as Social Security number).
- From visits to our websites (such as data from web forms, site visit data, and data from web "cookies").

We call this information "customer data."

Protecting Customer Information

The only persons who are authorized to have access to customer data are those who need it to do their jobs. They must protect it and keep it confidential. We maintain physical, electronic, and procedural safeguards that comply with federal and state regulations to protect customer data.

Sharing Information Inside Prudential

We may share the customer data described above with other Prudential Financial businesses, such as our insurance companies and agencies, our broker-dealers, and our banks. We may share it to serve you or maintain your account, or so our companies can tell you about other products or services.

Other Reasons Information Is Shared

We may share the customer data described above with other companies that perform services for us or on our behalf. This includes firms that provide mailing or marketing services for us, or develop and maintain software for us. We may also share it with financial firms outside Prudential, such as banks or securities brokers or dealers, when we have agreements to jointly sponsor or offer other financial products. We do this only if the applicable federal or state law allows the disclosure. Medical and driving record information are never shared for this purpose. We may disclose it as permitted or required by law, for example, to law enforcement officials, in response to subpoenas, to regulators, or to prevent fraud.

Employers and others have relationships with us to provide services in connection with benefits that they provide for their employees or members, for example, group insurance policies or 401(k) plans. They may limit our sharing of customer data about their employees or members. When they do, we honor those restrictions.

It's Your Choice

We may share customer data within the Prudential family to tell you about other Prudential products and services. We may also share it with non-Prudential firms to jointly sponsor or offer other financial products. Customers tell us they want this information. If you don't want us to share customer data about you for those offers, please let us know. We call this "opting out."

We may mail information about other products or services to you, or we may call you to tell you about them. If you would rather not receive information in these ways, please tell us.

You can do that using the attached form. Mail it to the address or call us at the toll-free number provided. We will process your request as quickly as possible. It may take us four to six weeks in some cases for marketing campaigns that have already started.

If you ask to be removed from our mailing lists for corporate offers, we will continue to send you information about your policies and accounts. We may include inserts about other products or services in these mailings. Opting out will not affect your relationship with your Prudential Professional.

We are mailing this Notice to the address we have for you. If there is more than one owner of a product or account, we send this Notice to the same address that we use to mail statements. Each owner may opt out for himself or herself, and may also opt out for the other owners.

The law requires us to send Notices at least once a year. If you have more than one Prudential product or service, you may receive multiple copies of this Notice. If you do choose to opt out, you only need to tell us once. We will honor your choices until you tell us to change them.

Former Customers

If your relationship with us ends, we will continue to handle information about you as this Notice describes.
