For employers, a lot goes into effectively managing their disability and absence management programs. Challenging regulations, complex leave policies, benefits plan performance optimization, and managing return-to-work accommodations are but a few challenges you face each day. The average cost of unplanned absence can be 8–9% of an employer’s total payroll. And when employees miss work, it impacts an employer’s bottom line in the following ways:

Direct Costs, such as: benefits payments, health care costs, and overtime

Indirect Costs, such as: need for temporary workers, training costs, lost productivity, and adverse impact on employee morale
